WEEK BY WEEK.

On Sunday last public meetings in support of Sinn Fein were addressed in Ballingarry, Roscrea, by Mr. L. Ginnell, at Clonal by Mr. Figgis, at Bagenalstown by Mr. Lennon, while in Cavan meetings were held at Corlea, Kingscourt, Bailfeloro', Crosskeys, Kilndock and Lavey by Messrs, Sean Milroy, W. L. Cole and Paul Gilligan. On Thursday night (21st) Mr. Griffith lectured at the Whitworth Hall, Drogheda, Rev. Dr. O'Keane, O.P., presiding. On Friday night Mr. Milroy addressed a public meeting in the South Dock and Trinity Wards of Dublin, and on the same evening Mr. Griffith lectured at the public meeting of the Dublin North Dock (Sean Connolly) Branch of Sinn Fein.

Fein.

On Friday night a Sinn Fein Club was established in Crossmaglen, South Armagh, with Mr. Ml. MacArdle as President, Mr. Edward Henrty, Vice-President, and Mr. Felis Feighan as Secretary. Over 60 members were enrolled, and the Party supporters, who had declared that not ten persons could be got in Crossmaglen to join Sinn Fein, were struck speechless with astonishment.

Struck speechless with astonishment.

New Branches of Sinn Fein were also established on Sunday at Ballyduff and Macollop (Waterford) after a public meeting, with Messus. John Daly President, James Quirke Treasurer, and John Cashin Hon. Sec., and at Longwood (Meath) after a public meeting at which Mr. Laurence Giles presided and Messus. E. J. Duggan and Fleming also spoke.

Messrs. E. J. Duggan and Fleming also spoke.

The text of the Franchise Act passed into law a month ago by the British Parliament has at last reached Ireland. Under its provisions about six million new voters will be added to the register in Great Britain. In Ireland the new voters will probably number some six hundred thousand, a large majority of whom will be women. It now becomes the business of all Sinn Fein Branches and Cumann na mBan to see that every eligible frach man and some women who is not at present a voter shall be a voter on the new register—for on that register the most momentous General Election of 1805, when the people of Ireland for the first time elected Irishmen to go to the English Parliament, will be fought. The General Election of 1918 in Ireland must undo the disastrous error of the General Election of 1805.

Under the new franchise law every Irishman in Ireland with a residence or a business premises qualification (we shall explain these qualifications later) will be entitled to a vote. Conscientious objectors and lumatics are excluded from the vote. Persons who support the Provincialist Party in Ireland ate not assumed by the Act to be necessarily lunatics.

vote both in Cork and Dublin. But a person possessing a residence in Cork and a residence in Dublin can vote only in one city. Equally a person possessing a business premises in Galway and Belfast can only vote in one city.

So much for the voter. There is much other legislation about the voter, but what we have set out is the kernel. Sinn Fein and Cumann in alban Clubs can get to work on this basis, and detailed instructions will be sent out-from the Sinn Fein executive later on. We shall now deal with the vertiste.

In Ireland only one register shall be made in each year.

The Town Clerks of Dublin and Belfast will be the Registration Officers for Dublin and Belfast. The Clerks of the Peace will be the Registration Officers elsewhere.

There is an appeal from them to the Law Courts.

It will be their duty to make a house-to-house or other sufficient inquiry as to persons entitled to the vote and prepare and publish a list of them. Any person whose name does not appear and who consider they are entitled can thereupon fill a form claiming a vote. The Registration Officers must print and issue a list of these claimants. Any voter may object to a claimant, but a list of the objections must be published. The objections will be heard by the official, who must give five days' notice to both objector and objected to attend before him. If without an-objection sorved, the Registration Officer refuses a claimant, he cannot do so without first giving the claimant five days' notice to attend before him and seek to prove his claim. If he disallows the claim, the claimant may appeal to the County Court against the decision.

In regard to the actual elections, all nominations at a General Election will take place on the same day and all pollings on the same day. A candidate must deposit £150, which in the original draft of the Act was to be returned to him if he won. If he loses, but polls more the one-eighth of the votes polled, the deposit is also returned. Lord Harcourt, at the request of the "Irish Party," got the following words inserted by the House of Lords in the Act:—

The amount shall be returned to the candidate when the candidate is elected as 500n as he has taken the oath as a member. These words were put in to penalise Sinn

Each candidate at an election is entitled to send one packet of election literature weighing not more than 2 oz. by nost to every voter. Each candidate is also entitled to send one asket of election literature weighing not more than 2 oz. by nost to every voter. Each candidate is also entitled to send one packet of election literature weighing not more than 2 oz. by nost to every voter. Each candidate is also entitled to use a suitable room in any public elementary school—the National schoolhouse—for public meetings in support of his candidature at reasonable hours. A charge, however, may be made for the room.

a vote. Conscientions objectors and limatics are excluded from the vote. Berth and the action is exposed as a summed by the Act to be necessarily hunards.

The Residential quadrication for a voter is defined as meaning that the voter "on the last day of the qualitying period" must be residing in premises in the constituency.

The Business Pramises qualification means that the voter must be occupying mans that the voter must be occupying the man that the voter must be occupying the state of the qualitying period.

The Qualitying Period is a period of street, and the little of administration of the little of t

It is not a reproach; the reproach is in the misuse of the term by those who do not know what they are talking about. And as it affects Irishmen it is something to be proud of. A Sinn Feiner means not only a man who is convinced of the truth that only by self-reliance and by working together can Ireland obtain her rights, but it also means that he belougs to the Party that in this latest hour of Europe, when chivalry seemed dead and honour only an empty word, proved to all the world that Ireland has still hundreds of children ready to lay down their lives for her sake. Sinn Fein means a faith in the old Celtic standards of culture and civilisation, a devotion to Christian principles and a pride in the immemorial traditions of a race that always held the soul above the body, honour above wealth, and clustity above every other virtue. All that IrishIreland stands for is conveyed by the watchwords 'Sinn Fein'—the renunciation of the material gospel of England, the rejection of her utilitarian philosophy which makes interest the highest law of corduct, the boycotting of her low ideals, of her gutter journals, and of her modern tendencies to depart farther and farther from the doctrine of Christ. This is what Sinn Fein means for Irishmen, and not only we but all the world ought to be thankful that there is such a policy alive to-day to save the sweetness and the wholesomeness of what was best in humanity for the future generations. Sinn Fein means or Lord Lausdowne and the increasing body of English opinion he represents; so presumably its views on such matters are authoritative. As the article in question is very short I venture to quote the whole of it, which makes reference easier. (The heavy type is mine)—

"An Irish correspondent, Mr. H. Carroll, writes from County Mayo that he would feel deeply the full explanation of the seas—and asks the curious question whether the absolute independence of Ireland is a condition precedent to the establishment of President Wilson's proposal. Surely nothing is to be gained ex happen to be great naval Powers. Before the war the American Government had proposed over and over again that private property at sea (with the exception of munitions of war) and unarmed merchant ships should be free from capture. This would be a large instalment of freedom of the seas in time of war. Literally interpreted, it would make blockades and the cutting off of food supplies impossible. The sinking of unarmed merchant vessels under any circumstances, by either cruisers or submarines, and the laying of mines in the open sea would be absolutely prohibited."

Now, this article is an excellent specimen of the very capable humbing by which England has been accustomed to rule this country. I will take the italicised portions in succession. In the first place, if the question is "curious" to "Common Sense," it is not enrious to us. We are quite inmiline with it, and know what is the full significance of it. We are not mixing up the rights or chims—these last being apparently different from "rights"—of Ireland with the freedom of the seas; we simply realise that any "treedom of the seas" that gives any great Power military centrol of freland is no "freedom" of the seas at all, but centrol of them by that Power. What is in question is not a definition, but a guarantee of freedom of the seas. We do not quarrel with the definition of "Common Sense," but no treaty will ever ensure it.

Of course, what the English advocates of freedom of the seas want is the same immunity from blockade by U-boat as they have hitherto enjoyed argainst blookade by nity from blockade by U-bont as they have hitherto enjoyed ngainst blockade by surface craft. On the other hand, they seek to control us herotofore all North Sea and ex-Baltie shipping by flanking the routes from Lough Swilly and Berchaven. And they hope to get this arrangement sanctioned by a con-cert of Powers. In other words, they have the effrontery to seek the support of other States towards that man predominance which up to recently they considered them-selves strong enough to maintain by them-salves selves strong enough to maintain by them selves.

Naturally, the Independence of Ireland is incompatible with this: hence to talk of it is "confusion of thought." It Ireland were neutralised, the English, if they refused to abide by-treaties would lose their favoured position, and he reduced to the state of "shot for shot, and lang all favours." Neutralisation of Ireland injures no State but England and might easily lenefit the others, especially a weak State like Norway, almost dependent on the sea for its existence and prosperity.

As regards freedom of the seas in peace time, it is worth while pointing out that Ireland was a barred zone as far as any conflict with English shipping interests was conceened. The old boycott of Cork is so well understood now that there is no need to emphasise it.

Hibermans, set to a marching tune. How would "We're the Johbers Passing By" do?

Some time ago the British Government appointed Sir Edward Carson to run a War Aims Committee, and that body is at presentaffording luxurious employment to a number of Carson's supporters at the rate of £1 per day hotel expeuses, first-class travelling expenses and "honorarium." Each Carsonian unfortunately of Ireland some £20 per week. It will be asked what he has got to do for it? This: to memorise a speech of 45 minutes duration and deliver this speech each night in a different town or village.

Each Carsonian receives a private and confidential printed copy of the speech. He spends a few hours learning it by rote, and thereafter he can travel up and down Great Britain and dwell in the best hotels, consume rare and refreshing wines, and smoke the best cigars at the tax-payers' expense and receive a cheque each week for £7 in addition. Here is some of the stuff he has to repeat each night:—

"Mr. Chairman, Ladies and Gentlemen,—The National War Aims Committee up.

"Mr. Chairman, Ladies and Gentlemen,
—The National War Aims Committee, under whose auspices this meeting is held, represents all the great parties in the State. It is a truly national committee concerned only with national interests, and it has two objects: First, to keep before the nation the causes which led to the great war, and next, to impress upon the nation the vital importance to human file and human liberties of continuing the struggle until victory is attained."

tory is attained."

The £20 a week Carsonian then goes on to denounce the Hun, talk of Christianity and Civilisation, and drop into poetry. He de
Say not the struggle nought avaneth,
The labour and the wounds are vain;
The enemy faints not nor faileth,
And as things have been they remain.

And as things have been they remain.

For while the tired waves, vainly breaking, Seem here no painful inch to gain; Far back, through creeks and inlets making, Comes silent, flooding in, the main."

Then the Carsonian orator is instructed to talk of the "reckless outpouring of German gold," and to discuss the question of "how long the war is to go on." He is to say:

"This is a serious and solemn question.

... much as we long for peace, let us not be tempted to make a sort of peace with our task unfurished. "We accepted this war," Abraham Lincoln said of another great conflict for freedom, "for an object, and a worthy object, and the war will end when that object is attained." 'Pray God,' he added—and we may add it too—'Pray God it will never end until that time.'

"Here and there I hear it asked: 'Will it ever end?' 'Is it possible that we can never achieve what we have set out to do."

Sir Edward Carson's instructions to the

Yes, Ladies and Gentlemen, it will end, and we can achieve what we set out to do.

Sir Edward Carson's instructions to the speakers at this point is to emphasise the word will." With the power of appointing persons at £20 a week, to reel off a speech, we do not wonder at that other British agent, Malcolm Lyon's jealous reference to Sir Edward as a "Hoon."

It was an Englishman who wrote that virtue was a matter of geography, and in the sphere of politics English statesmen accept this dictum. The outraged howl of English virtue split the welkin when, Belgium having refused passage to Germany, Germany invaded Belgium. Now, Prussia. England art France had years before signed a treaty guaranteeing Belgium's independence, and England declared Germany had broken this treaty by her action. Albania, like Belgium, is also a little country whose independence is guaranteed by twaty between the Great Powers, including England. The other night in the English House of Commons, Mr. Balfour, English Foreign Secretary, in reply to a question, said that the treaty had "ceased to have binding force, as the signatory Powers are now at war."

Thus England repudiates her cwn guarantee of Albanian independence, and calmly announces that if the signatory Powers to a treaty be at war the treaty is no longer hinding—a doctrine which, if true, would completely justify Germany's invasion of Belgium and even justify ther amexation of that country. Of course, it is not true; of that country. Of course, it is not true; or the condition of the Draily News' or organ of the British Non-Conformist Conganing of the Thus England repudiates her own guarantee of Albanian independence, and calmly announces that if the signatory Powers to a treaty be at war the treaty is no longer hinding—a doctrine which, if true, would completely justify (fermany's invasion of Belgium and even justify her annexation of that country. Of course, it is not true; but it was put forward to try and cover one of the most treacherous episodes even in English political history. With England's name signed to the guarantee of Albanian independence, the English Government had secretly contracted to let the mortal enemies of Albania, the Italians, grab that country. Meanwhile, "Remember Belgium, and reflect that England is engaged a this war fighting for the rights of Small Nations.

An English Sunday paper says—"A futile attempt to abolish food queues was made in Nottsigham yesterday. Following the introduction of a temporary meat rationing scheme pending the nutional scheme, peremptory orders were given that queue, must be discontinued. Angry crowds round several city shops had to be dispersed, mounted police being summoned by alarmed shopkeepers. The queues at the meat, pork and tripe shops were longer than ever. Horseflesh was our sale for the first time, and was in good demand." Evidently "lawlessness" is not confined to Ireland.

From an English paper:

Mr. Daniels (Secretary to the Navy), speaking at a Labour Loyalty mass meeting, said the American. British and French fleets were ready for the German fleet if ever it should come out of its hiding place.

Our forefathers, our fathers and ourselves have unitedly continued bitherto a work of anti-clericalism and irreligion. We dragged luman conscience away from religious belief. When a wretched creature, bending under his burdens, knelt to pray, we raised him up, we told him that there were no realitles bahind those clouds. Together, by a magnificent gesture, we extinguished in the heavens those lights that nover will be relit. That is our work; it is our revolutionary work. Do not imagine it is ended; it is only beginning. What will Viviani say when he reads that Daniels declares that there are realities beyond the clouds, and implies that the lights of heaven are relit? Will T. P. O'Connor, will Joseph Devlin, will J. Lord Beaverbrook has been put in charge of English propaganda in foreign countries. Irishmen will remember him as the proprietor of the "Daily Express," the paper which described the Easter Rising as "an orgy of murder and theft" and which urged that the leaders "must be ruthlessly punished." On no account were they to receive the consideration that was shown to the South African Rebels. "There is a world of difference in the two cases. The Boers fought as soldiers. They did not endeavour to establish am Independent Republic by brutally killing women and children and looting lewilers' shops." The same article announced that "the Government is properly in constant touch with Mr. Redmond, and we cannot believe that the Irish leader will countenance or tolerate any week-kneed 'mercy.'" Mr. Redmond, as Ireland learned later, did not belie Lord Beaverbrook's confident expectations.

The English Government is engaged in closing up Kynoch's Arklow works. Formerly there was an extensive fishing industry in Arklow, but in recent years the fishery has been brought to the so of rain by Governmental restriction of the area permitted to be fished. We suggest to the people of Arklow they should demand the removal of this restriction, and that they should take counsel as to the establishment of a suitable industry in place of the one England is now destroying, before the premises of Kynoch's have been completely dismantled by the Champion of the Small Nations.

The following is the result of the Plebessite in Garranboy (Killaloe) as to whether Ireland should appeal to the Peace Conference for Complete Independence.

From the London "Daily News" organ of the British Non-Conformist Conscience we take the following paragraph (page 3, col. 3, Feb. 22nd) illustrating the present pitch of British morality:—

NATIONALIT

SATURDAY, MARCH 2, 1918.

THE OUTLOOK

Roughly speaking, there are now but two schools of political thought in Ireland—that which believes Ireland should be governed by England and that which believes that Ireland should be ruled by the Irish nation. This fact marks a big advance in clearness of political issues. It is true that these two divisions of mind have existed in Ireland for generations, but the fact that there was such a lundamental principle of cleavage has been long obscured by clouds of Provincibits tophistry.

It seems but yesterday that the readjustment of the machinery by which England governed this country was regarded as synonymous with the extinction of England's government and the restoration of the Independent Irish State.

We see things with clearer vision to-day in Ireland, and the acquirement of such accurate perception is the first step on the road to national freedom. If our purpose be the re-creation of an Independent Irish State it is a danger and a delusion to regard the attainment of the status of an English shire as the accomplishment of our aims.

In the wild Imperialistic stampede that marked the beginning of, the present war there was, to those who had a real conception of Ireland's true interests, a very grave menuce to the movement which was making for a resurrected Irish Nation. The blare of Imperial trumpetings, the bellowing of orators not then entirely discarded as leaders of national thought, the rampant raging ergy of Press adulation of the Imperial defenders of religion, civilisation and small nationalities—all combined to make a whirlwind of fraudulent public oppnion which it seemed would at last submerge whatever remained of the Irish Nation's protest against its conquest and extinction.

But the miracle happened, and the moment which the Empire-builders had chossen to write the epitaph of this ancient nation proved to be the hour of its great disillusion and religion, civilisation and send religion in terms of English institutions and adapting its de-

Nesterday Ireland was thinking in terms of finglish institutions and adapting its demands to the chances of English Party interests. To-day Ireland is measuring its demands not by the accidents of Westminster or the intolerant anti-Irishism of Empire-builders, but by its traditional inspiration of national right. Today we are not acclaiming "an Act for the better government of Ireland" by England as our Charter of Liberty. We are now assailing and repudiating any such claim by England to hold or govern our country.

we are now aballows the following the claim by England to hold or govern our country.

This change of judgment and attitude on the part of Ireland is based upon something very far removed from the racial hatred which some good people regard as the basis of all Irish national activity. As a matter of fact, the race hatred is all the other way about. John Bull loves this country of ours, but he hates the idea that the Irish race should rule it. Ireland's objection to this attitude of John Rull is logical and reasonable enough to impartial outsiders, but to the English Imperial mind it betokens a prepensity for red ruin, chaos and irreligion, and sundry other awful possibilities. The revival of the old national aspiration for Irish freedom seams startling and bewildering to many minds, in Ireland, just as God's daylight is deaxling and blinding to a man confined in a dark cellar for years. This simile is a fair illustration of the method by which is a fair illustration of the method by which is a fair illustration of the method by which freedom with apprehension and dismay. Ireland has been kept in the dark. The shadows of England's Imperial ambitions hid our country from the world. We were represented to Europe as a race addicted to periodic disorder and chronic distress, and the word was whispered into the ear of Ireland by the Dempire-builders, and the word was whispered into the ear of Ireland by the Dempire-builders which England, in the goodness of her heart, shielded Ireland of Ireland showly and reluctantly was taught to believe that the gloom of Imperial shadows was the native atmosphere of the Irish people.

But, alas! for the projects of the Empirebuilders. This war, out of which they were to carve undisturbed world dominion for another century, has produced wholly unexpected results. Its thunder awoke subconscious reverses into clear impressions. Its blazing 'Aire and Irry lit up the world, and revealed many things that England land decreed should remain hidden. It revealed Ireland to the Irish hantion in a way somewhat out of accord with the theories of Imperialism and Provincialism.

It has revealed this, for example, as vouched for by the British Nation to-day is asking: "If nature so advantageously placed one country, how is it that, instead of henefiting by it, our country loads for uneasiness. And again, from the same source—"The trade of Europe with Carada, the United States, the West Indes, the Gulf of Mexico, the Panama Canad. the Carribean see, all the Republics of South America, all the States of the Australian Commonwalth, New Schad, China, Japan, Russia in the Pacific, India, Ceylon, and Africa are dependent directly upon the control has greater enture of Bulgaria,

THE PROVINCIALISTS.

After the two pro-English factions in Ireland joined in South Armagh to defeat the Irish Nation they agreed to stand together hereafter against the menace to their corrupt existence—Sinn Foin. The campaign of the United Provicialists has been opened simultaneously by the "Belfast News Letter," the "Irish Times," and the "Freeman's Journal." The "Belfast News Letter, and the "Freeman's Journal." The "Belfast News Letter, and the "Freeman's Journal." by Professor Mahaffy, and the "Freeman's Journal by Mr. John Dillon. They wave for the better duping of the country they prey upon different flags. They are one in heart and intention against the Fraedom of the Irish Nation.

The campaign planned after South Armagh is now in full blast. The three chief daily organs of the Provincialists depict Ireland as rioting in anarchy. The device adopted is to collect all exciting incidents, criminal as well as political, print them together, and by their cumulative effect suggest to the reader a state of chaos in the hand. This is the oldest journalistic trick in existence. It is played eyery day by the three papers mentioned. If a bank manager alleges he has been robbed of money; if a burghar breaks into a post office and robs it; if some of Mr. Dillon's former employes in the monilighting business pay a brief return to their old trade, the carrion journals of Carson, Mahaffy, and Dillon collect the records of these activities, arrange them together, and present them to the public as a "Irue Account of the State of Ireland, And Professor Mahaffy and Mr. John Dillon, neighbours and friends, meet and like the augurs of old Rome admired by Cieero for their brazen practices upon popular credulity, do not burgh in each other's faces.

The journalistic trick at present being played uron the Irish recapile by Carson, lar credulity, do not hough in each other's faces.

The journalistic trick at present being played upon the Irish people by Cars n, Mahaffy, and Dillon may be thus realised. In England at the present time there are a thousand outrages a week being committed against person and property. If "Nationality" were to take the reports of these crimes each week, as detailed in such journals as the "Daily News," "Daily Mail,"

"Birmingham Post?" and soforth, and, ranging them together, head the columns of crime "The State of England," such a journalistic device would convey to the average reader's mind the impression that England was in a state of anarchy and lawlessess. Messay. Carson, Mahaffy, and Dilon have used their journalistic hirolings to defame 'Iroland in this manner. The administrators of the Defence of the Realm Act give them secret support. The "Irish Times" and the "Freeman's Journal" are permitted by the Censorship to print what the National journals are forbidden by the same Censorship to mention.

The object of the Press campaign representing Ireland as in an anarchical state is to prevent, as one of the instruments of Mr. Dillon expressed it, "Ireland falling completely into the hands of the Sian Feiners when the Convention breaks up." In view of the possibility of the Convention breaking up. Mr. John Redmond has been ordered to resign by the Dillon-Devlin clique, who are to evolve a "new policy" and offer up Redmond as the scapegoat for their sins. But Sian Pein must first be got rid of, and Mr. Dillon in a speech delivered to a dozen A. O. H. jobbers hast week urged the British Government forward. "After the death of Thomas Ashe," said this man, "the Government ran away, which was not calculated to improve respect for the law. Then there was a series of armed raids on houses—a most scandalous praceeding, which, he was sorry to say, was spreading rapidly in certain parts of the South and West." Mr. Dillon thus prepares the ground in advance for the British Government in the year 1918, uven as in 1915 he secretly conspired with Birrell and Nathan from Dublin Castle the prosecution of Irish Nationalists and advised, as Mr. Birrell testified at the Harding Commission, that where the agencies of Dublin Castle could collect evidence acquist Irish Nationalists these men should be arrested, indicted, and imprisoned.

To-day there is no country in Europe where there have sond to reland the hand, from which they have been d

Ireland will again regain the Land for its People.

There were many questions and answers in the British Commons a few days ago on the question of sugar-beet growing in England. The Government has recently spent £125,000 in acquiring land for the purpose, and the whole subject was canyassed at length in a conversation, the report of which filled three columns of "Hansard." In that conversation no Irish member took part. Ireland was not so much as mentioned. It is well known that England is draining twenty millions a year from Ireland into the English Treasury. Yet not an Irish member rose to suggest that Ireland might be allowed to use portion of her own money—say half a week's tribute to England—to promote an important national industry. The Shomeens who pretend to represent Ireland at Westminster have no eloquence except to denounce their fellow-countrymen, no energy except to plot and scheme against their country's independence, but they connive at the calumnious misrepresentation of Ireland which flows steadily through the English Press. The "Daily Graphic the other day said that "British money" was being voted to provide Irish school children with meals. The "Morning Post." has been talking of "the rich subsidies on which Ireland has been fattening for generations," and, with reference to the Food Question, has been pretending that "Ireland is starving England." The Irish hirelings at Westminster silently assens. They make no allusion to them in Parliament; they write no letters about them to the papers; they give no interviews; they deliver no speeches. They are not thinking about fighting Iroland's battles. They are only thinking how by servility and cowardly silence they can job places and curry favour with their Inglish paymasters at Ireland's expense.

A statement recently by Sir L. C. Money throws some further light on the U-boat warfare. He said that the number of similar English ships sunk during the same period as 145. Of course, ships completed in these months were laid down much earlier, so that ships for three months in the middle of the present year, or 40 for three months at a later period. On the other hand, the U-boat surkings in October and December were rather higher than in other recent months; so that the 145 figure might not be reached again for a similar period. All the same, the discrepancy between output and sinking is very great, and it is not likely that it will be bridged over in the near future.

But evidently there is not much reason to suppose that the Allies will be numerically inferior this year, or that they will be unable to attack at some point if thought advisable. The Germans fully realise that they may again be strongly attacked in the West, as is proved by their quite recent orders regarding anti-tank methods; they state that "machine guns firing armour-piercing balls will be charged with this task," in addition to artillery action. Still, having resisted all attacks in the West for three years, the now strongly reinforced Germans probably experience a greatly increased confidence. They can now, without endangering any part of their own front, detach great numbers of men for a great and continued attack—a course hardly possible before this.

The fourth list of subscriptions to the Ashe Memorial Fund is published to-day. The amount acknowledged in this list is close on £1,400, and this brings the total received up to the present to almost £3,000. The response from some parts of the country has already been most encouraging. No site for erection of the memorial hall has yet been decided upon. The Committee are considering offers of four or five different sites in the centre of Dublin. The Committee intend to erect a hall which will be the equal, if not the superior, of any building of the kind yet erected in Dublin.

Circo Cuimneacain Comáir Asar. ASHE MEMORIAL FUND

The Coisto Gnotha of the Gaelic League has decided to erect in Dublin a Memorial Hall, to be called Arus Thomais Aglus, where the Irish ideals that were his will be promoted; the Irish Language and Irish Music will resound; and where visitors in sympathy with his principles will be assured of an Irish Welcome.

An opportunity to give practical effect to their sympathy is here presented to the tens of thousands who followed to Gasnevin the remains of Tomas Aghas, as well as to the scattered hundreds of thousands who have since stood in spirit beside his grave.

We await with confidence their response to our Appeal.

The following subscriptions are acknowledged with deepest thanks. Remittances should essent to the Treasurer, Ashe Memorial Fund, 25 Parnell Square, Dubluc:--
