Ni & Re'mondite M.P.'s appeared in 8th Armagh on Sunday to keep £400 a year in their hands. Only seven turned un at West-nigster to vote against conscription!

A photograph issued by the Redmendites entitled "In the Fighting Line at South Armagh, shows seven berlinites of military age, who support England in the war, but refuse to join the British army.

"Andagity, andacity, and always audacity." Mr. Pevlin at Cossunglen said the Irish Party believed in going to Parliament in order to resist the imposition of new taxation on Ireland. Since 1914 Devlin and his colleagues have voted in the English Parliament in increase of seventeen millions annually in the taxation of Ireland. In 1914 the British taxation of Ireland. In 1914 the British taxation of Ireland was 124 millions sterling. It is now just 30 millions sterling. The "Irish" M.P.'s helped to vote this 30 millions.

For the last twelve months the "Freeman's Hournal" has been run on money supplied by the British Government (£63,000), and is being run at a lass of £700 per week. Its chiefleader writer, Mr. Robert Donovau, is in receipt of money from the British agent, Malcolm Lyon, in connection with a bogus society established in Dublin under the title of the "Irish League of Nations Society." The Irish League of Nations Society. The Irish League of Nations Society. The Irish League of Nations Society. The Irish League of Nations Society is one of the British devices for obstructing Ireland's appeal to the Peace Conference. To such straits is the British Lyon driven.

Mr. Denis Henry was a colleague of Mr. memiah McVeagh on the Speaker's Computee. Mr. Henry sits for Senth Derry onth Derry was a Home Rule seat—Mr. T. d. Henly once sat for it. Mr. McVeagh, tome Ruler, agrees to make it safe for Mr. Genry, Unienist. In return, what can Mr. Tenry, Unienist. In return, what can Mr. Tenry with Mr. McVeagh hopes to sit in place of the old South Down constituency—sate of Mr. McVeagh. South Tyrone, a Home Rule seat'temperarily eccupied by a Unionist, to be made safe for the Unionists, and last Wicklow, where the Unionists, and last Wicklow, where the Unionists vote is to I in a, is suggested to be landed over to be Unionist. We wonder what those people Wicklow who still linger in Redmond sin think when they find that their "trusted of "conspires to hand over one of their stituencies to the Unionist mincrity. As that they may think in South Derry, torth Antrim, West Belfast, South Tyrone, as shall leave Sauth Armagh to say.

the rest of his Party, on the 6th October, 1990 —

We are entirely loyal to the Empire as such, and we desire to strengthen hin crial bonds through the Pederal system government. We so not demand such local autonomy as the Bartish subspowering Celanaes possess. For we are witting to forego the making of cur own fariff, and are prepared to abide by any fiscal system enacted by the British Parlament. Also we are prepared to bear cur full burden with England. Scotland and Wales in supporting such Imperial charges as the Army, Navy, and Diplomatic Cops, which is not gore by the Colonias.

That was Mr. Redmond's statement on the evolution to day, the has not verred from it, and he stood by it unreservedly last week He agrees that Ireland must share England's War Debt—that she must have no fiscal system separate from England's, and no power to establish even a militia. Mr. Redmond is the person in whose names Dillon and Devlin appeal to the electory of Armagh. On Sunday last we were eye witnesses of the Devlinite procession in Crossinaglen bearing banners in seribed. "Up Redmond." And Redmond stands for the permanent taxation of Irelard—to the tune of at least 24 millions a year—for England's War Debt, and for the entire control of Irish trade and commerce by the British Parliament.

The history of the partition proposals is briefly this. Messys. Redmond, Dillon, to the time of at lenst 24 millions a yearfor England's Was Debt, and for the entire control of Irish trade and commerce by the British Parliament.

The history of the partition proposals is briefly this Messers. Redmond, Dillon, T. P. O'Commor and Joseph Devlin agreed carly in 1916 to exclude the Counties of Armeigh, Antrim, Down, and Derry from Incland. The Unionists then defanaded Fermanagh and Tyrone also. Owing to the epposition in Fermanagh and Tyrone the quartette were afraid to agree, but in May, 1916, they agreed with Sir Edward Carson and Mr.
Lloyd George to hand over the whole rix counties. A "Convention" was arranged in Belfast to endorse the surrender. Although every effort made to bulklose the nomrefused be bulktosed. Mr. Redmond declared that if the Convention did not endorse the surrender of the six counties he would resign. Mr. Dillon told the delegates that if they rejected partition they would kill Home Kule; and Mr.
Devlin declared (St. Mary) Hall. June 18; that "the only solution is the exclusion of the six counties. . . . I you refuse the proposals youu will be playing the enemy's game." By 475 votes to 265 the Convention agreed to the dismemberment of Ireland (June 23rd, 1916). Three days later Redmond, Dillon and Devlin held a meeting of the Parliamentary Party, when some exciting scenes occurred, several of the members protesting. They were threatened with political annihilation by the Four Bosses, and eventunly cowed into passing a resolution, with two dissertients—Messes. P. O'Doberty and P. J. O'Shanghnessy—declaring that "we learn with the deepest gratitude of Ulster's decision to agree to cut itself off from Ireland." The next move was to get the

ULSTER FOR IRELAND!

The English Premier has adjourned his Convention to await the result of the Armagh Election, as eight months ago he ad-journed his statement in the English Parla-ment to await the result in Longford. The result of the Longford Election caused the abandonment of the "County Option" Partition Scheme. The result of the Armagh Option' Partition Scheme is to be revived.

Between the two candidates before the electors of Armagh the unfettered judgment of Armagh could never hesitate. Dr. McCartan has been all his life a hard and unselfish worker for the Irish Canso. He has risked his life and his fortunes and endured imprisonment for that Cause. His ability is no less conspicuous than his patriotism, and tho citizens of Dublia ten years ago recognised both by electing him-then a very young man to a seat in the Dublin Corporation. Today Armingh is asked to elect him her representative. Dr. McCartan stands in America to-lay the cuvoy of the great unijority of the Irish people. Partly through that fact the present pressure is being exerted by the American Government on the British Cabinet in connection with a settlement of the Irish Question. England seeks to minimise to America the Irish claim—to pretend to the world that the Irish Nation does not desire to be free. The election of Dr. McCartan by the people of Armagh will spoil the game of the British Government, and make clear to the United States and the world the position of our country.

This week the English Liberal Press admits that England cannot go into the Peace Con-terence "with the Irish Question unsettled." Rescommon, Longford, Clare, and Kilkenny have made "the Irish Question" a matter of pressing international concern. Armagh can usure that the settlement of the Irish Qu. s tion must be a full and true settlement. Armagh come ensure that Ireland's claim will of not less import to Europe and America than the claims of Poland and Finland. Armagh, by cleeting Dr. McCartan, can break through the last entanglement England has set round Ireland to keep her apart from world polities. Armagh, by electing Dr. McCartan, can smash to atoms the conhatching to delade Ireland with a sham measure, withholding from us all power over our trade, and establishing on our soil a permanent ascendancy faction-a sham measure accepted by the leader of the Irish Parliamentary Party, as he accepted the Councils Bill, the bogus Home Rule Bill, and the other easures with which England sought to de-

So hopelessly had the Irish Party broken down in their Homo Rule effort, says the Westmoath Independent," so utterly discredited had they become both in Ireland and England, so doad was the Home Rule issue after the batrayal by Asquith and Lloyd Scorge, Sir Edward Carson informs us that he entered the British Gabinet under the opinion that nothing more was to be heard of Home Rule until stor the war. When we some to analyse the strength and the success of the opposition now, whon America, Canada, Australia and, no doubt, the other Alicitountries, as well as Russia, declare it to be an International issues also give a selectermination to Ireland, we can estimate the prospects of a sattlement after the war, when langland, rescued from her troubles, would be able to ignore outside pressure and again lend her sattling encouragement to the Orange irreconcilables. In plan words, Carson specently as twelve mooths ago reckoned Home Rule as a dead horse. As a dead horse it ould remain were it not for the activity in the meantime slisphyed by Sinn Fein. WEXFORD.

These who maintained that Irish freedom was only a domestic question are getting hard knocks these days, says the "Wexford Echo." They used to laugh at the Sinn Fein claim for international consideration, had they will not laugh in future. From all parts of the world messages are reaching John Bul with regard to Ireland. When he trges Genany to free Poland the reply comes, "Why don't you tree Ireland?" when he speaks of Belgium and Alszee-Lorraine he receives a similar retort. His suppression of Ireland is found to be embarrassing to France and a positive injury to Belgium. The only people it is helping are the German Jingoes. When they want a reason to justify their keeping a hold on conquered territory they say they are hat following England's example in holding Ireland.

Monaghan has sent a contingent of worker, into the constituency, and is raising and for warding money for the Election Fund.

TIPPERARY.

The Clonnel Board of Guardians, on the motion of Mr. Lyons, seconded by Alderman Stapleten, has unanimously adopted the following resolution:

"The we, the Clonnel Board of Guardians as one of the Irish public bodies who have consistently supported Irishand's rights as small nation, protested against the partition of our country and the conscription of its people, hereby call on the electors of South Armaga to return as member of Parliamenthe heroic Dr. McCartan, who worked his passage to America to place Ireland's Peace Conference demands before the American people, and who has been since, and is still victimised through the influence of the Mag lish Government for thus asserting the right of our small nation, thereby protesting against the partition of Ulster and the conscription of the remnant of the Irish people at home."

Tyrone.

TYRONE.

Redmondism is a daugerous foe, says the "Frontier Sentinel," for it has not the courage to stick to its own utterances. My John Dillon, for instance, has stated that hencer stood on a recruiting platform, yet he was one of those present at Mr. Asquidy great recruiting meeting in Dublin, and in "Hansard," the journal of the English House of Commons, he is reported to have sud on the 11th May 1916 (page 223)—"I and those who sit around me have been trying to hims these men (the frish Insurrectionists of Easter Week) into the ranks of the British army." Who can trust prevarientors so andactions, what nation would televate them for twenty-four hours? No wonder the Oranga Press of Newry and Belfast is working hard to secure Mr. Donnelly's roturn; no wander the prejudices of Orange bigotry are being appealed to to defent Sinn Fein; no wonder the recruiting agouts and the conscriptionists are busy.

The Corruptionist candidate is a Mr. Pat.

pealed to to defent Sinn Fein; no wonder the rectuiting agouts and the conscriptionists are busy.

The Corruptionist candidate is a Mr. Patrick Donnelly, who has controd the constituency for ten years, says the "Elster Herald," yet it is found necessary to appear to the prejudices of 1,200 Unionists in order that the defeat of Sinn Fein may be accomplished. The Party is foolish enough to imagine that a snatch victory now in South Armsgh will save it at the General Election, but its fate is scaled beyond year or may. The election is being rushed in a most feverish manuer, and Redmondism stands exposed as the greatest jobbing institution the country has seen since the days of the Brass Bord.

Father Short, C.C., Carrickmore, writes—Open Mr. Griffith—Please find theque enclosed for Dr. McCartaut's Election Find. No more devoted patriot or better Irishman then the Doctor ever sought the suffrage of the people. Tyrone looks with confidence to the men of South Armsgh to do the reduct in this supreme crisis by standing in solidly with the rest of Ireland, and thus save the country from partition, conscription and a cruel over-taxation."

PARTITION.

What Redmond said:—
I regard the proposals as vital to the lish cause. As Loader I point the way. If then this is the last time I ever can appeal to the reople of Ireland, I will have done so in obscionce to the dio ales of my heart and conscience. If my own people decline to follow my lead I must decline absultely to accept responsibility for the course that is sgainst my conscience. (Beliast, June 28rd, 1916.)

What Dillon said :—
The rejection of these proposals will mean the killing of Home Rule.

What Dovkin said:—
Mr. Dovkin was even more emphatic and

In my judgment the only solution is the exclusion of six counties. The alternative means that occans of thood will be spit it the Unionist counties were included. Irishmen will never get anything unless they accept oxclusion. (Bolfast, 18th June, 1916.)

What O'Connor said — the right of Ulster to exclude herself.

What Donnelly said at the Belfagt Conven-

John Dillon recently projected himself into American-Irish politica. It is probable the position of the Sinn Fein candidate in the South Armagh election may involve much mention of America. The first following extract is from a speech of John Dillon's, delivered helore a meeting of the Legal and Economic Society, University College, in April, 1912. It is interesting in the light of Mr. Oillon's recent profundities on the state of Ressa. His knowledge of that country, was nev remark, is only equalled by his knowledge of treland.

The people of the United College.

The people of the United States are vory sick of their Senate—at least, very many of them—the more democratic section of the U.S. I regret to say that, although the U.S. Senate has included within its members many of the ablest and most distinguished men in America, it is sorrowfully admitted by the leading men of the United States that the meth sl of election to the U.S. Senate has produced perhaps the most colossal corruption the world has even seen. Entire Legislatures have been lought up for cash in connection with the election of a single U.S. Senate, and millights of dollars have been spout in corruption.

I claim confidently that the financial profisions of the Bill (the Home Ru'e Bill now mbalurel on the Statuary Book) re sound financial proposals under which reasonable mon and responsible new would not shrink from underteking the government of the country. With regard of the question of financial independence. There is a great deal of extravamental talk on the question of financial independence. We read in certain newspapers are and over again the statement, "How an any nation call itself a nation or presented over its own Customs?" What non-as elasticity of the word "free" has never elare or since been so beautifully x-amplified.

You really cannot have a nation federated as we have agreed that Ireland should be with England, tied by each close ties as for fitty years we have asserted our willingness to accept. You cannot claim for such a nation the right to enter into relations with foreign Powers which may upset perhaps the treatics of England and the Emirie by which we are bound if we are part of the Empire equally with Great Britain. And let me say this: that we, at all events, who are engaged in conducting the Bill have already piedged out elves, and must pledge ourselves frequently in the future if we take this Bill and accept it as a settlement, as we are prepared to do more than the settle this great international quarrel. Thet would be dishonourable, and a would be betraying the British Ministers who are pledging their future credit to settle this great international quarrel. We will not consent to use it as a leverage to wring out of England further concessions in the direction of the separation of the two countries. For any pare, as long as I live in Irish politics I will adher honourably to that pledge, and will do everything in my power to discountenance any idea the political prescience which allows him to tale it secula seculorum on a rickety domestical content international quarrel. The Munster and Louister Bank has had the most prosperous veri in its records. In proportion to its paid capital it enjoys perhaps the largest deposits of any known inancial institution. The following is an analysis of the accounts presented for last half-your with those of 1913 for comparison of pre-war conditions:—

The increase in loans is only £240,000, a very small amount of accommodation, which has gone down from 50 to 32 per cent. Cash on the other hand, has expanded by £1,300,000, and invostments in British Securities by £500,000. The balance of the $ve millions increase in first's derived from deposits was transferred to the British Treasury, whose bills to the amount of £2,848,000 were taken up by this Bank. If we add the increased invostments due to purchase of War Loan Stocks to the British Treasury Bills bought we arrive at the handsome contribution of £3,880,000 presented by the Munster Bank to the war funds of the British Government. This money was paid into the Government account at the Bank of England, to be paid out to English contractors, who distributed it in the shape of wages to the munition workers, who spent it in the shops, which lodged this large capital mainly and ultimately into the hands of the English banks. These facts were not mentioned at the meeting. To sum up, then, we find that in four years the assets increased by five millions. One and one-third millions, roughly, went into "cash on hands at the Bank of England and with other tankers." The cash too, as well, se the investments, appears to nons. One and one-third millions, roughly, went into "cash on hands at the Bank of England and with other bankers." The cash too, as well us the investments, appears to have gone largely to England either directly or via the Bank of Ireland, in the manner which we indicated last wook. Three and one-third millions were sent to London to the British Treasury. That accounts for four and two-third millions. The balance of one-third of a million or less was alone retained in Treland, we hope, in the shape of eccammodation for traders. Only five per cent. of the increased assets were rendered available for the occouragement of Irish agriculture, commerce and industry.

We now turn to the liabilities. It is advisable to bear in mind that in examining a balance sheet the assets should first be examined. Their amount and nature should first be examined. Their amount and nature should first be scrutinised. The attention given to deposits is fallacions. Deposits are a Lablity, not an asset, and care should be taken not to be misled by Chairmen's insistence on the growth of deposits as an evidence of either financial stability or prosperity on the part of a bank. No doubt, they are pleasing indications of the growth of savings and prefits on the part of those engaged in farming operations; but they are little indication whatever of prosperity on the part of a bank. One never hears the head of an industrial or commercial company insisting on the rery large increase of the company's debts as a prominent factor. Yet the unique heads of financial institutions in Ireland seem to revel in the amount they owe the public. It cannot be too clearly understood that deposits have no existence except on pager. They are debts of the banks and not assets.

The principal feature is the rise of deposits by no less than nearly five millions in four years. We do not, however see what credit attaches to the bank for this rise, which we due to causes over which it had no control, except in so far as it showed energy in opening up branches and tapping new sources of wealth. The net profits, after providing for expanses, robate on bills, interest on deposits, and for all had and doubtful debts, amounted to £34,902. The total profits of the year were £72,900, not a great sum to carn with oleven millions of deposits. The available working capital of the bank was however, very much less than this. At the beginning of the year it had £8,103,00s assets on loan or invested. During the year, principally in the third quarter, it received the very large accession of £2,664,000 new deposits, of which we estimate that about one-fourth only was available for loan or investment during the period reported. On deposits, of which we estimate that about one-fourth only was available for loan or investment during the period reported. On this basis the profit of the bank was only 0.82 or thirteen-sixte-emits of one per cent. Considering that it works practically on deposits, on which it pays 21 per rent., the rate of interest carried by its funds is roughly three and a half per cent. together with whatever precentage represents the working expenses. The working costs we estimate at from one to one and a-half per cent. of the useable resources. The gross banking profits were apparently from 4½ to 5 per cent. of the useable resources. The gross banking profits were apparently from 4½ to 5 per cent. of the capital of the bank is invested in Five per Cent. Treasuries and Four and a Half per Cent. Treasuries and Four and a Half per Cent. This considerably exceeds the accommodation (£3,969,600) rendered to Irish customers.

This we know to be definitely exported to finance English industry and to swell the deposits in English banks. In addition to capital there has also been a considerable export of cash and cone, as is shown by the following comparison of the cash accounts for December, 1916 and 1917:—

Dec. 31, 1917. Dec. 31, 1916.

Increase ... £192 £1,091

The increase of a million in the cash at call and short notice in one year is very remarkable. No explanation of this large movement of money appears to have been given by the Chairman at the meeting. If the money were placed in Ireland it is a fair assumption that there would at least be some trace of it to be discovered. It is generally believed that the Irish banks have lately resorted to sending Irish deposits to English banks, and the trebling of the cash at call in one-year strongly confirms this riew. We are not crivicising the policy of the Irish banks at present. We merely wish to establish the facts, and we intend to draw conclusions later on, when the whole position can be reviewed. The failure to find employment for Irish savings is due to many causes for which the banks are not necessarily to blame, but it is impossible to resist the belief that much more could be done to find openings for the employment of capital in Ireland, particularly in the direction of short loans.

The failure of the Munster and Leinster Bank to disclose its working expenses rendes its report of lessened value, as shareholders cannot judge the ability of the management from the information disclosed. Most of the other Irish banks disclose this information. The general position of the bank, from a function in the time of view, is a strong fiquid one. It is able to meet all possible demands with promptheses, and when the large increase of deposits come into full earnings the profits of the bank this year should show a large rise of the bank this year should show a large rise. Increase £192 £1,091 deposits come into full earnings the profits of the bank this year should show a large rish.

At the last Fermov Quarter Sessions a claim was heard from Mrs. Mubel Sadle'r, Tle Grange, Fermoy, for £40 componistion for eattle maliciously injured on the lands at Grange on Christmas Eve. A claim was he red for £20 from Mrs. Spillane, rietualler, who had a bullock injured on the same occasion. Evidence was given by David Kearney, farm labourer; Mr. Creagly, exterimary surgeon; Mr. John Magee and Mr. Barry, cattle dealer. The evidence showed that six soldiers were discovered on the lands at 3.30 in the afternoon. They had driven the cattle into a corner, brutally beaten them with sticks, cut off the tails of two, and afterwards neighertated acts of unmentionable cruckty upon the unfortunate asimals, causing them internal injury. The Recorder found it impossible to determine whether the six soldiers who committed the entrage were from Fernoy Barracks or Kilworth Camp, six miles distant. Therefore, in allowing £20 to Mrs. Sadleir and £10 to Mrs. Spillane for the injury caused to the cattle, he direct of the money should be level off both the urban and rural cistricts.
